> Mr Shamir's public statements in Washington provided few signs that he was prepared to be more flexible on any of these points. However, US officials are confident that Israel genuinely wants to get its troops out of southern Lebanon and will be prepared to carry out a series of partial, unilateral withdrawals. But Mr Shamir made clear that a total Israeli withdrawal could only be simultaneously carried out with a pull-out of the 40,000 Syrian troops in eastern Lebanon.

Although Mr Shamir was insistent on keeping to the letter of the May 17 Israel-Lebanon agreement, a further pull-back of Israeli forces could be negotiated with the Lebanese Government within the context of that accord. Syria has strongly condemned this agree-ment and refused to pull any of its troops out.

US officials noted that President Gemayel had said after meeting President Reagan that he was prepared to go beyond the letter of the law in setting up appropriate mechanisms and conditions to achieve withdrawal of all foreign forces from his country.

President Reagan also hopes the new agreement will make Mr Shamir's Government tism on the issues of Israeli "more mature" in its attitude the news strategic cooperation troop withdrawals from Leba-agreement as one of the most non, US arms sales to moderate moderate Arab states.

Runaway carrier wrecks houses

An 11-ton armoured personnel carrier ran out of control yesterday, crashing into three houses and ending up in the living room of a fourth. Several people were treated for shock.

The carrier, from Borden west Sussex, ca-down Petersfield Whitehill, Hampshire, demolished a lamp post and took off the porch of the house of Mrs Alice Ottewell, aged 80.

The Army offered to rehouse in their married quarters anyone made homeless in the incident.

The carrier ended up embedded in the living room of Mrs Sylvia Walpole.

Another of the houses clipped by the runaway vehicle was that of Mrs Marie Hunt, who is pregnant. Her husband George, aged 29, said: "I heard a big and the whole house shuddered with everything moving.

"I could hear my wife screaming, and ran downstairs fearing she was trapped. There were cracks in the wall of the house you could put your hands through.

Mrs Ottewell said she was in her kitchen when she heard a bang. "I ran to see what it was and my front door was down, the windows were smashed and everything was broken."

There were two men in the carrier when the accident happened.

Three of the gang were said to be in their 20s, two white and one of mixed race. The was no description of the fourth.

Police block £5m IRA ransom

By Richard Ford and Stewart Tendler

Police throughout the United Kingdom and Ireland are working together to prevent payment by the Associated British Foods organization of a £5m ransom demanded by the Provisional IRA for the release of their kidnapped executive, Mr Don Tidey.

The ransom demanded by the terrorists last Sunday is the biggest ever made for the safe return of anyone abducted in Ireland, and is needed because the organization is short of cash to run both its military operation and the increasingly widespread campaign of its political wing, the Provisional Sinn Fein.

The demand was made by telephone to the company's heacquarters at Bowater House

But the police, and govern-But the police, and government in the Republic are determined to prevent any money being paid by the firm for the release of Mr Tidey, aged 49, chairman of its Quinnsworth chain of stores in the Republic. Mr Tidey, a widower, has two sons and a daughter has two sons and a daughter. At one stage this week the company is understood to have considered the possibility of paying the ransom but Scotland Yard and the Government stepped in to forbid it. The company was told of the value of the ransom money to the Provisional IRA arsenal.

On Thursday a reply to a question in the House of Lords vas used to signal to the IRA that the company would not be allowed to pay the ransom.

The question did not name Mr Tidey but it drew a reply that non-payment of ransoms was not the decision of any individual or company but a government policy.

Last night, the company said that although it would consider most things to get his safe release, they had to take account of the overriding policies of both the Irish and British governments that no demand should be paid.

Subsidies are to be paid to first step towards wresting control of the capital's buses and Tubes from Mr Kenneth Livingstone and his fellow politicians at the Greater to the paid to the part of the taxpayers and two thirds from London ratepayers. The Department of Transport would set a rates figure in the way that the Home Office does on behalf of the Metropolitan Police and borough ratepayers would have it put on their bills each year.

If they wish London boroughs can still provide concessionary bus and Tube passes for the elderly but Mr Ridley was not forthcoming about how such schemes are to be financed.

At present the GLC subsidizes the outer London boroughs' pensioners because it can take money from commer-cial ratepayers in the City and

The Government envisages there will be redundancies among London Transport staff. ## Dry summer seals Pakamac's fate

Pakamac, a name synonymous for the past quartercentury with the vagaries of the British weather, has fallen into the hands of the receiver.

By a cruel irony, the very unpredictability of British rain on which the company built its folding plastic raincoat fortune was in the end its downfall; this year's long dry summer dealt sales a mortal blow. The firm was based, inevi-tably, in Manchester, the English capital of wet weather. This week two accountants from the firm of Deloitte Haskins and Sells moved into Warwick Mill in Middleton,

Late swing may help Caldera

From Colin Harding

Seven million Venezuelans go to the polls tomorrow to choose a new President, and a two-chamber Congress, with the results looking far less clear-cut than they did even a few days

In the absence of up-to-date opinion polls - publication of which has been banned - it still seems likely that the opposition candidate, Señor Jaime Lusin-chi, of the Democratic Action (AD) Party, will win. He has been the front runner from the start, and enjoys solid support from both employers' organiza-tions and the main trade

But the candidate of the ruling Christian Democrats, Señor Rafael Caldera, has made a strong late showing after a paign. His managers have been confidently proclaiming that he has done enough to pip Senor

Lusinchi at the post. Señor Caldera, who was President between 1969 and 1974, has striven to distance himself from the unpopular government of President Luis Herrera Campins, and present himself as an experienced stateman, capable of uniting a divided country, and remaining above the undignified sectarian mud-slinging and dirty tricks that have marked the eight-month campaign. He has already announced the names of his hypothetical ministerial team, which includes some members of AD.

A late trump card played by Senor Caldera was to take full page advertisements, quoting the national hero, Simon Bolivar, as saying that "in order to do things well, they have to be done twice."

The late surge by Senor Caldera has been helped by the weakness of the AD candidate, who has been portrayed as an easy-going lightweight.

The two left wing candidates
- Senor Teodoro Petkoff of Movement Towards Socialism (MTS) and Señor José Vincente Rangel backed by a 12-parry coalition - are expected to get between 10 and 15 per cent of the votes between them.

The Bundestag formally. roted yesterday to lift parliamentary immunity on Otto Graf Lambsdorff, the Economics Minister, so that the Bonn public prosecutor can serve an accusation of corruntion on him. Count Lambsdorff was among the 43 people who were in Parliament early in the morning and voted unanimous ly to lift immunity.

The prosecutor's office announced that it intends to serve the indictment sometime next week. The prosecutor also rejected Count Lambsdorff's accusations that it had misled him about the nature of the charges he might face. He said in a statement that Count Lambsdorff had been fully informed of the investigations and given photocopies of relevant documents.

Meanwhile the Bundestag has approved a new law on the financing of political parties. This arose directly from the scandal surrounding the nunerous payments by the giant Flick group of companies to politicians of all parties in the

A main accusation in the uproar over Flick payments to leading West German poli-ticians – apart from Count Lambsdorff and others accused of corruption - was that no official record was kept of the donations. Under the new law all payment above DM 20,000 (£5000) must be notified to the tax authorities.

There was noisy argument in Parliament over a proposed amnesty for those who had broken the tax laws in making donations in the past. The Social Democrats wanted to strike out this emnesty, while the Government wanted to allow courts to decide the issue. A compromise eventually left the issue masettled, and the new law was passed by a large majority. Only the Greens, who campaigned long over the Flick affair, voted against the law.

The Bundestag also agreed that in future parties not only had to state the source of their funds but also to say what the money was spent on. Pressure on the Count to

Time limit on damages claims

SCOTLAND

The Prescription and Limitation (Scotland) Bill, sponsored by Mr. Alexander Endie (Midlothian, Lab) obtained its second reading in the Commons after Mr Peter Fraser, Solicitor General for Scotland, had said it was an important measure of law reform. It represented a significant step forward in making the law relating to claims for personal injuries more readily understood and more likely to be helpful to those who required its protection.

Mr Eadie, explaining that the Bill would amend the law on time limits for bringing actions for damages for personal injuries or death, said it personal injuries or death, said in would cover not only the more obvious cases like road accidents but conditions which might not out conditions which might not immediately be thought of as personal injury – such as those resulting from working in an unhealthy environment. Some industrial diseases could take a long time to become apparent.
Often it had to be left until death

His Bill was based on the Scottish Law Commission's draft Bill. There had been consultations with many interested parties. It restated the basic principle, though more clearly, that no action for personal injuries would be brought after three years from the date of the injury or the date that the claimant became aware of an injury.

Bill against power sharing adjourned

ULSTER

A Bill stelling to end power-sharing in the Northern Ireland Assembly was talked out in the Commons by Mr Nicholas Scatt, Under Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Mr Kenneth Maginuis (Fermangh and South Tyrone, UUP) said power sharing was contrary to the principles of British democracy. The Bill sought to transform the Assembly into a structure acceptable to Unionists, in accordance with his party's election policy.

It never occurred to the Government and Opposition front benches at Westminster to share power in ment and Opposition front benches at Westminster to share power in the government of the United Kingdom. His party had never believed that insistence on power-sharing in Ulster was genuinely aimed at the extension of democratic devolution to the Province.

aimed at the extension of democratic devolution to the Province.

They could not accept any structure by which those who lost an election had a veto over those who won. His Bill proposed to make it possible to devolve administration, however gradual, to the Assembly without attaching to that devolution the veto of power-sharing, and would ensure some prospect of a future for the body.

The Rev Ina Paisley (North Antrim, DUP) said the only barrier that stood between a deal between London and Dublin was the elected forum of Northern Ireland, where the Unionists had a majority and could make their views known.

Mr James Melynessey (Lagan Valley, OUP) said the assembly standing would be dramatically increased if the Government accepted the reasonable and practical proposals in the Bill.

widespread acceptance of the government of Northern Ireland was a recognition of the realities of life in the province and not just a matter of political argument.

What the Bill in effect would do was to provide for a return to the system that existed in 1972 and which brought about the frustration and ultimately many of the problems they faced today.

There could be no stable or effective government in Northern Ireland that did not have a substitutal measure of support in both parts of the community.

The Government still believed that the assembly, as it was regulated by the 1982 Act, offered the most hopeful framework for initiating a satisfactory solution of Northern Ireland's political difficulties.

Community is to survive.

Those "suitably specific" conclusions would have to be clear enough for Mrs Thatcher to be absolutely certain that there would be meaningful controls on Community spending and that Britain would not have to make a net contribution to the Community larger than a modest 0.1 per cent of the gross domestic product. At present levels that would be about £270m a vear.

Only against such cast-iron assurances would Mrs Thatcher be prepared to consider rec ommending to the Britisl Parliament that there should be an increase in the so-called

"VAT ceiling".

At present, member-states are required to pay up to I per cent of value added tax receipts from a common basket of goods and services. That money is now not enough to meet the bills, and there will have to be a higher VAT rate if it is ever going to be possible to bring in Spain and Portugal, introduce new policies or even go on paying existing costs - hence the crisis. If that ceiling is raised, Sir

Geoffrey made clear to the Commons during the debate. That is because it would only agree to raising the ceiling if it won an adequate reduction in its contributions. One cloud on the horizon is the European Parliament, which meets the following week to 'carry out a post mortem on the summit. It has given a warning that it might throw next year budget out if insufficient progress is made, but the threat seems somewhat empty.

"A British reaction, including the massive use of military force, was considered little short of impossible" by the military and civilian officials who planned the Argentine occupation, the report says.

Potent penalty

A warning to all footballers: do not score a hat-trick. A man can get himself sent off that way. Referee Clive "The Book" Thomas of Porthcawl has vowed that players doing too much celebrating after scoring will be warned for the first offence, booked for the second and sent off for the third.

Mr Thomas, who booked seven people and sent off an eighth (for non-scoring offences) in a midweek match, is concerned that running at crowds and making phallic gestures of delight and defiance to friend and foe causes crowd violence. "I recently saw a senior international player sparking off the opposition crowd with his celebrations."

Carpaccio's Lion: from the Doge's Palace to pride of place in Piccadilly

A vastness of Venice but still not enough

the painting is "of great chromatic intensity".

Retrace your steps. Enter the first gallery you looked across to see the Lotto. It is bulging with Titians; the exhibition includes 20 of his paintings, together with eight drawings. Leave out the Marsyas, on which we shall never agree, and come and stand with me before the Portrait of Ranuccio Farnese; without moving your feet you can see also his Portrait of Two Boys and his Tarquin and Lucretia (another late picture, but without the dangerously free draughtsmanship that makes me uneasy in the Marsyas); no great distance away is his Portrait of Cristofero Madruzzo. These people cry out with the life in them; not Rembrandt himself, born 20 years after Titian died, set the blood pulsing more strongly through his figures, and the virility in Titian is a shared by almost all these Tintoretto is represented almost as amply as Titian; so is Veronese, on whom I dote more than any of the other artists of Venice (would that it had been possible to remove the end wall of Gallery X from the Accademia and bring it here to show us his Supper at the House of Levi, all 42 feet of it); Lotto, Moroni, Bassano, Paris Bordone, Palma Vecchio, Pordenone - all these artists are strewn about the Royal Academy until next March as though the lenders didn't love them, which in the case of the Accademia often seems to be true.

There is no painting by Carpaccio other than the Lion, but there are three drawings, and one of them will make every Carpaccio-lover, and indeed every Venice-lover, howl with the yearning to go at once to the Scuola di S. Giorgio degli Schiavoni, for it is a sketch of what became the last picture in the St Jerome series there, little white dog Pietro Zampetti, says demurely that and all

I could go on for hours picking-plums out of the pie, but this exhibition is not just a collection of masterpieces; it is the gorgeous sunface of Venice in the days of her swelling pride and assured achieve-ment. The century had begun in defeat; the coalition of Italian states, angered and frightened by the apparently irresistible growth of Venetian power, had allied themselves with the Turks, who destroyed a Venetian flect at the first home from the Crusade.)

Long before the century's close, of course, the seeds of decay had begun to sprout; by the end of the seventeenth century Venice was worm-eaten through and through, and it was an empty shell that Napoleon blew down with a single breath. Let us be thankful that nobody concerned in this exhibition wanted to take it to the middle of the eighteenth century, so that we would have seen Canaletto and Tiepolo fiddling while Venice

We see the work of some of the most confident artists in all history, painting, living and working in a polity that had not yet lost its overweening confidence in its own power, riches and endurance. They re not, the geniuses who adorn the Academy, court painters in any sense; they had to watch their step, of course, and Veronese got into frightful trouble with the Inquisition for Supper at the House of Levi itself, being accused of blasphemy for the wonderful informality of it all. And an artist painting a great nobleman of the city would not have put the warts in even if the sitter had asked him to. But no one can go to The Genius of Venice and fail to realize that these men knew their own quality, and thought it no shame to demonstrate what they knew. If you doubt me, go back and take another look at the Lotto St Christopher.

The exhibition is vast, but would have liked it vaster, I would like to have seen more of the objets glass, jewelry, furniture of sixteenth century Venice. (There are some fine sculptures, most of them small, which hint at what we are missing. But this is greed on my part, as is my feeling that invisible orchestras should be gently playing Monteverdi as we go round). What we have is magnificent, for it is a degionstration of a century of art that makes a statement as clear, assertive and unambiguous about its time and place as does the voice of Renais-sance Florence, or for that matter the Funeral Oration of Pericles and Shakespeare's Histories. (The catalogue, in scope and quality, is fully worthy of what it records.)

On the whole, the artists of sixteenth century Venice did not paint their own history or their own time, apart from what can be be read from their portraits; Carpaccio's Lion was the republic's sign-manual, it is true, but he is in heaven at this moment for the St Jeromes and the Ursulas. All the same, it is history, and not just art history, that floods Burlington House, and from the moment we see the Barbari at the entrance we are part of another world, another time, and we remain conscious of that otherness through every step we take. It is said that the Royal Academy has gambled heavily on this exhibition, which can either restore its fortunes or bring it close to disaster, according to whether it is a success or a failure. It descrives to be the greatest success in the Academy's history, as for Professor Hale, the Academicians should make him a present of the Michelangelo tondo to put on his mantelpiece.

Time to ring round our illusions

It is 23 years since Britain announced that "the recognition and maintenance of the independence territorial integrity and security of the Republic of Cyprus" was in the common interest of itself, Greece and Turkey.

Part of Cyprus has now seceded from the republic and declared itself an independent republic. This does not appear to be a breach of the treaty, since none of the four parties to it have apparently failed to "prohibit activity aimed at promot-ing" that outcome. So what has happened? We protested and we condemned the secession; but if the inhabitants of northern Cyprus do not, as it appears they do not, wish to be part of the Republic of Cyprus. what justification have we for saying they ought not to have their way?
What British interest, whether or not a "common" interest with Greece or Turkey, is served by our condemnation or disapproval of what has

Our interests in 1983 are not the same as were our interests in 1960. It does not matter a fig to us whether Cyprus comprises two republics or one republic. Even supposing that the residual republic tried to vent its displeasure upon us by calling the sovereign base areas into doubt, the question would still have to be answered: what British interest do the base areas serve?

So far from the bases being a British interest in 1983, they are a menace to our interest. The detachment of 100 British soldiers in Lebanon is evidence, by its insignificance, that no real British interest there is at stake and that no physical British effort is being

It is also evidence of the assumed imperative of British policy - that wherever the United States gets into a scrape we must arrange to get some of the egg on our own face. The sovereign bases were not literally essential for marooning our 100 men in Lebanon. But although not physically essential, they are still psychologically effective, in sustaining the delusion that Britain has a presence in the Levant.

British policy has not yet come to terms with the modern facts of geopolitics. In a military sense our real power and interests may be represented by concentric rings with the point of the compass upon the United Kingdom, rings in which power and interests diminish progressively in inverse ratio to the square of the distance from the centre. The inner rings extend over Western Europe and up to the Arctic Circle, and a sort of bulge carries them far out into the Atlantic. But by the time Eastern Europe and the Middle East are reached they have become so faint as to be invisible. Whatever happens there and farther east and south will be neither determined nor influenced by Britain. Vast realignments will no doubt take place in Asia and Africa in obedience to the rise and decline, the strength and weakness, of the the strength and weakness, of the forces in play. These realignments may or may not have indirect implications for the defence and safety of the UK. But those implications will have to come implications will have to come within range of our actual power, before we can recognize them, let alone take steps to cope with them.

Unfortunately we are not permitted to talk this language of our own common sense; for we have committed ourselves to two monstrously absurd propositions, both of them explicable historically and psychologically but rationally indefensible. One is that we depend hand and foot for our survival upon the military and political will of the US. The other is that we are part of an embryo world power which comprises most of the nations of Europe outside the Russian orbit. Consequently we find ourselves obliged to conform with the hallucinations of America and the conscious makebelieve of Europe.

It is difficult to describe the American picture of the world without resorting to pathological terms. Under the influence of a global delusion the United States treats the law of the inverse square if it were non-existent: it attributes to its perceived global enemy, Russia, the same ability which it attributes to itself to ignore the realities of geography and humanity. Hence the weird combi-nation which the Americans exhibit of hysterical anxiety about their own safety with overweening confidence in their power to organize the peoples and the affairs of distant continents.

The effect upon us of the American delusion has been compounded by the effect of the European make-believe. We have got to the point when a European decision and European authority are claimed for every external act of the UK, as though Belgium and Luxembourg. West Germany and Denmark either shared the same perspectives or accepted a jot of genuine responsibility for the cloudy assertions which are made in their name in all the quarters of the globe.

All bad things, like all good things, come to an end. One day and why not soon? - the United Kingdom, if it survives as such at all, will recover the ability to perceive the outside world from its own standpoint and not that of others. Those who raise their voices against our two manias while they still last - the American mania and the European mania - are doing what lies in their power to bring that blessed dav nearer.

Taken from a speech delivered in Glasgow yesterday.

Essentially English, with a new vitality

Just before the last war my late and their interiors, landscape and young Mr Piper" used to give her lifts into town. That marked my wife's first awareness of the artist John Piper.

Mine was that of a generation which grew up on King Penguins and Penguin Modern Painters. The former, which appeared in 1950, was the volume dedicated to the Romney Marsh with its watercolours of landscapes and buildings already executed in that idiosyncratic alliance of crayon, wash and ink which Piper developed over the years as his particular vehicle for interpreting the countryside. The latter came out earlier, in 1948, and included two of the great series commissioned by the Queen Mother during the war, of Windsor Castle, which now adorn the library at Clarence House and of which legend has it that George VI remarked "I'm sorry that you had such bad weather,

Mr Piper".

I was also hypnotised by one of his earliest theatre designs for the ballet The Quest. I remember Doris Langley Moore later telling me she had to concoct a patriotic plot in order to get Ashton out of the army to appear - and what better source than Book One of the Faerie Queen. These are early impressions made on an adolescent by an artist whose 80th birthday, we now celebrate. There can have been few so prolific in this century, literally thousands of drawings, paintings, graphic works, theatre design, stained glass, photography and ceramics. What small verse can I possibly add to the hymn of praise now arising?

What I wish to sing about may seem a small and very insular thing, Piper's very Englishness. The work of other giants of his generation - Moore, Hepworth, Sutherland or Nicolson - could, in the main, be plonked down anywhere. They are products of international modern-ism. Their imagery and iconography have been less tempered by the vast literary and visual heritage of their own country. Piper has never turned his back on that and, to a degree, has, as a result, suffered in the esteem of fashionable critics. And always he has loyally remained with us and never become an expatriate. How could he when all around lie the sources of his inspiration?

Without doubt he will go down as the greatest exponent of the English topographical tradition in this century. Through his art he has given vitality and life to a form that seemed mummified in the format of its forbears or to be outmoded by most true in the art of John Piper.

They are works of art about works of art. They are simultaneously elegies and polemics. The principles of the modernist movement have been assimilated and applied but never at the expense of the innate visual conservatism of the British.

IHE PI

In this respect his long joint editorship of the Shell County Guides with John Beijeman should not be forgotten. In many ways they now seem old-fashioned in approach but they do represent an attempt to look at the visual fabric of the country in a way different from the art historian's applausometer which Piper: elegies and polemics forms the least attractive aspect of Peysner's mighty series. The Betje-man-Piper approach is romantic and historical, totally un-Germanic, in fact rather dilettante and literary. And, as in the case of the topographical work, this forms a peculiarly English way of looking at things.

I shall always remember my first glimpse of John and Myfanwy Piper in the early 1970s. It was a golden late summer evening. As we approached the flint farmhouse they sat together on a wooden bench at a table on which Myfanwy was shelling into an earthenware crock peas that John (a brilliant gardener) had grown. On the table stood glasses and a bottle of wine from the Sitwell castle of Montegufoni. Over their heads was a huge old bleached sunshade. It was a scene so simple, domestic and totally unaffected, speaking of security and serenity but with a respect for the innate nobility of common things typical of Stubbs. To me it summed up all that was most true in the art of John Piper.

Burn-ups in slow motion

There is something about ballooning that goes to the head; and I don't mean the champagne. When the very first man-carrying Montgolfière – a gorgeous blue and gold creation, 75-feet high, with the Signs of the Zodiac emblazoned round its crown - rose up from the Bois de Boulogne in November 1783, the crowd below burst into applause and song. balloon passed over Les Invalides at 500 feet, the pilot, de Rozier, felt an unexpected vibration in the Montgolfière's circular gallery (the classic balloon basket had yet to be designed). De Rozier called out to his companion, the Marquis d'Arlandes, hidden from him on the far side of the balloon. "What are you doing Monsieur? Are you having a dance, perhaps?" Anyone who has ever travelled in a balloon can quite believe that he was. It is an intoxicating experience. My own first flight was made from a field in Normandy, in a red and white striped "Montgolfier moderne" called Les Quatre Vents. With its roaring propane burner, and huge stately canopy overhead, it was like riding on a cross between a dragon and a cloud.

In the silent interval between burns. I watched the world turn gently on its axis far below (the balloon itself feels perfectly still), and heard a dog bark, a bicycle bell ring, and a pheasant call in the distant woods. From that moment I entered into a zone of enchantment that has left me faintly dissatisfied with earth-bound existence ever

The bicentenary this winter of mau's first free flights (in a Montgolfière or hot air balloon on November 21, and in a Charlière or hydrogen balloon on December 1) marks an anniversary of the imagination, as much as a scientific breakthrough. Men had flown in their dreams, of course, long before this. Chinese flying chariots, Arabian magic carpets, and a rich variety of birddrawn ships, ten-league magic boots, and cannisters of incandescent fairy dust had come to their aid. Leaving aside the somewhat sketchy data on the flights of Icarus and Ariel, we may note that King Bladud (father of King Lear) was killed in a crashlanding on the Temple of Apollo in 852 BC; while Oliver of Malmesbury died tower jumping with bird's wings in 1020 AD - the first of many such feathery fatalities.

In 1638, the Bishop of Hereford, perhaps the most poetic of all dream flyers, had more success flying to the moon in a harness of wild swans. And Cyrano de Bergerac, an early proponent of solar energy, rose effortlessly to the stars in an Two hundred years ago the first manned balloon took off from Paris on its maiden flight (right), carrying with it man's hope of liberation from his earth-bound existence. Richard Holmes looks back to those pioneers of gasbag grandeur and reflects on its jet-age renaissance aerodynamic belt of glass globes containing melting dew. Regular pious levitations were also per-formed by many medieval Italian saints rising out of their choir stalls in the odour of sanctity. These spectacular achievements all tended to overshadow the helicopters and parachutes of Leonardo da Vinci that were quietly entered into his notebooks and ignored for centuries.

But to fly for real: this added a wholly new dimension to human hopes. The intrepid balloonists (the adjective became their exclusive patent) created a new kind of folk hero for western scientific culture. The late eighteenth century balloon craze was first dominated by showmen like Blanchard and Lunardi. "You will observe, Madam, that the balloon engages all mankind," remarked Johnson weightily to Mrs

But with the nineteenth century came more deliberate pioneers and inventors. Among many one may pick out the Godard family (including Fanny Godard who flew in white silk tights), a firm that eventually built the Paris Siege ballons; Glaisher and Coxwell, who flew above 30,000 feet without oxygen, writing cool, impeccable notes about their blackouts; Nadar who invented aerial photography; and John Wise who discovered the "jetstreams" of the upper air and first ballooned right across America. Many of their stories are retold in a forgotton classic, with beautiful illustrations by Tissandier (himself a great ballonist), Travels in the Air (1871) by Glaisher and de Fonvielle.

These balloonists were all larger-than-life figures. They combined the talents of inventors, explorers, and publicists with a natural daring and individualism that made them flamboyant prophets of the scientific age. They had the meticulousness of the technocrat, and the mildly deranged romanticism of the poet. Most characteristic of them all, perhaps, was the Swedish engineer Salomon August Andrée, who mounted an expediton to fly across the North Pole in 1897, and was lost in the Arctic wastes.

Andrée's flight diary was miracu-lously recovered with his body, and lously recovered with his body, and those of his two companions, years later beneath the ice of White Island, east of Spitsbergen, in 1930. It contains the following entry, made on July 14, 1897, while hanging 99 feet above the northern pack ice: "It is not a little strange to be floating here above the Polar Sea. To be the first that have floated here in a balloon. How soon, I wonder, shall we have successors? Shall we be thought mad, or shall our example be followed? I cannot deny but all three of us are dominated by a feeling of pride. We think we can well face death, having done what we have done. Is not the whole, perhaps, the expression of an extremely strong sense of individuality artists. ality, which cannot bear the thought of living and dying like a man in the ranks, forgotten by coming gener-ations? Is this ambition? The rattling ations? Is this ambition? The rattling of the guidelines in the snow and the flapping of the sells are the only sounds heard, except the whining of the wind in the basket."

This moving passage seems to sum up so much of the heroism of those early aeronauts, and their passionate belief in scientific progress. Yet it is also shadowed by an awareness of hubris, a sense of the Quixotic nature of their endeavours. For ballooning has always had its

The crossing of the Atlantic in 1978 by Double Eagle II; and the establishing of new high altitude hot air balloon records by the British balloonist Julian Nott in 1974 and 1980 (his frail blue carbon-fibre pressurized gondola is on display at the Science Museum) have pioneered a new heroic age of aerostatics. For the appeal of ballooning corresponds, surely, to something permanent and restless in the human spirit. It is the appeal and the magic of free flight, flying inside the wind and open to it, at its mercy but also at its grace.

The French philospher Gaston Bachelard has written in his wonderful study, L'Air et les Songes, of the eternal human dream of the "aerial experience", of the "liber-ating airborn movement", of free ascent and descent, as a necessity of the imagination, as a necessity of the imagination, as part of our very notion of what "freedom" is. In the end, ballooning is a kind of metaphor of this human aspiration. It lifts us into a renewed world, both perilous and beautiful. Its touch of absurdity is yeart of its charm and absurdity is part of its charm and truth. Our future skies need balloons, far more than they need missules. We must learn to dance in

AGENDA FOR ATHENS

The sometimes superficially absurd manoeuvres of members of the House of Commons who are trying to make a point can often illuminate political reality in a way that nothing else does. So it was this week when nearly a third of the Conservative Party twisted itself into knots in an attempt to give the Prime Minister a little helpful guidance in advance of her journey tomorrow to the European Economic Community's summit at Athens.

The Community is running out of money enough to cover its expenditure, and requires an increase in the contributions it receives from member states which provide it with what are called its "own resources". Britain, which had started from a stance of extreme scepticism about whether such an increase in "own resources" was needed at all, modified its position at the Stuttgart summit in June. Mrs Thatcher is now prepared to "consider" an increase provided, but only provided, that the Community Budget arrangements, under which Britain's contribution is unfairly high, are reformed, and the Community's profligate spending on agriculture is brought under control.

bargaining in Athens and as a prelude to it, 121 Tory backbenchers, many of them newcomers to Parliament, were persuaded by that independentminded backbencher Sir Hugh Fraser, and by other critics of the Common Market who are more he is, that it would strengthen Mrs Thatcher's hand if they own resources" should not be increased. Far from feeling duly satisfied) will obviously helped, however, the Government was of the opinion that to go to Athens inhibited by such a motion was tantamount to being mulations, does the reality lie? prevented from negotiating at

So the Whips went to work, as Whips do, and 66 of the errant backbenchers obediently withdrew their names from the original motion and signed another, which had the Government's approval. The gist of this was that there should be no increase in "own resources" except on the conditions the Government is making. The irony did not, however, end there since the majority of those who did not withdraw their names from the original motion still voted against the Labour amendment which was couched in the same terms. Only a small band of seven critical Tories stayed with their motion and voted against the Government.

Their small number is not. however, the measure of the significance of these bizarre events. Mrs Thatcher goes to Athens without formal strings but with a clear understanding that she could not get the assent of her party for an agreement at any price. What is more, she will be helped by the fact that the back next year. Such repayment governments with which she is almost certainly cannot be with-together of British political attitudes to the Community. Since the election, the leaders of the Labour Pary have virtually abandoned their commitment to withdrawal from the Community, and instead insist on reforming it. At the same time, the great majority (far wider than the 121) of Conservatives no longer feel that the defence of their Europeanism requires pliancy towards flaws in the Community. The "non-European Party" has come to accept Europe, albeit demanding reforms. The "European Party" now demands reforms very firmly without fearing that this might throw into question the British commitment to Europe. Only the Liberals manage to sound as though, for them, the Community right or wrong is a self-sufficient slogan.

The instructive debate in the House of Commons on Thursday, however, achieved something more than the expression There will be some hard of this new tendency toward political unity on Europe. It also served usefully to bring into the open the question whether (given the reforms on the budget and agriculture) the increase in EEC "own resources" is a genuine necessity. It is one thing to say that we will consider it on wholly committed against it than the given conditions as though the result of that consideration were an entirely open question; signed a motion declaring that it is another to imply that such consideration (the conditions lead to the conclusion that an increase will be necessary. Where, between these two for-

That there has been a certain shift in the British position since Stuttgart is clear. From being clearly unconvinced that there was a case for increased "own resources" the British Government is prepared to consider it (on the given conditions) though Mrs Thatcher's formal position is that she remains to be convinced. The justification for this change of emphasis is threefold.

First, the enlargement of the Community to include Spain and Portugal, which is desirable in order to strengthen the foundations of democracy in Europe, will cost extra money. Both countries are well below the extremism. It provides a forum general Community level of prosperity; both will be net beneficiaries from the Community; both will increase the Community's total outgoings.

prosperity in the Community, we should in effect be paying less because we should get money negotiating will have taken that out raising the element of "own point, too. resources" which is calculated as There has been a coming a notional (and harmonized) 1 per cent of the VAT tax base. Third, it is likely that new money will be needed to finance special programmes, for instance the programme for the research and development of information technology. None of this implies that the increase in "own resources" need be substantial. Justifiable new expenditure (after allowing for saving on agriculture) could imply raising the VAT-element ceiling from 1 per cent to 1.2 or 1.4 per cent. What precisely might be necessary cannot be calculated until the arithmetic of saving from the other reforms has been done. But two further points can be made against those who would resist any increase. Given the conditions Mrs Thatcher is insisting on, a higher "ceiling" would not push Britain itself (contributing less) above the 1 per cent limit for some time, and it would, of course, be many years before the new "ceiling" was reached.

Whether a final settlement will be reached at Athens may be doubted, but certainly a decisive breakthrough by the heads of government there is not out of question. A new unity of attitudes appears to be developing and the change in the French approach is particularly heartening. Their position that they can only agree to financial guidelines for agricultural expenditure if similar cash-limits are applied to industrial and social spending is an approach which the British Government plainly does not find unsympathetic. In other words, though the bargaining will be hard, there are signs of convergence. Mrs Thatcher has every reason to believe that if she stands firm on the conditions she has laid down, a solution acceptable to Britain can be obtained, for without Britain's agreement no solution is possible; and every member state wants a solution. Perhaps more than most leaders of Community nations, the Prime for the EEC not principally in terms of economic advantage but politically. It provides a strong economic base for the west of Europe as a whole, which is its best defence against of shared interests in which the heads of the member governments have regular contact with each other to try to reach common positions on questions Secondly, if Britain secures the "safety-net" proposals which would fix each member's net success, failure seems hardly

THE PLACE OF PAROLE

The Home Secretary has now given to Parliament a fuller statement of his policy of curtailing the privilege of release on licence for prisoners convicted of certain types of murder and the privilege of parole in the case of prisoners given a determinate sentence of more than five years for crimes of violence or drug trafficking.

His decision, first announced at the Conservative party conference, came in response to public concern about the increase in violent crime and the sometimes glaring contrast between the length of sentence passed and the length of sentence served in prison. But he has been criticized in his method for misusing the parole system and even for upsurping the function of Parliament in as much as he is effectively debarring some categories of prisoner from the individual consideration for early parole that the Act makes general.

Neither charge sticks. The element of discretion in the whole business of advising and granting parole is far too great for that kind of objection to find a footing. But there is no doubt that the Home Secretary has introduced a discrepant factor into the procedures for administering parole and release on licence; and that has caused unease at the Parole Board and one resignation.

As introduced in 1968 and as developed since, the process of consideration for parole is rooted in the individual. General criteria have been evolved and altered, sometimes at the in- others. But that was because stance of a Home Secretary in support of other objectives of his penal policy, but they have never been more than principles in the light of which each case is considered on its own merits. In its very first report the Parole Board noted that in regard to certain especially heinous or dangerously prevalent crimes "it might be thought to be against the public interest to allow parole which, if granted, could be seen as tending to diminish the general deterrent effect of a particular sentence". That is precisely what the present Home Secretary thinks, in part (the other part being that parole in these cases tends to reduce the penalty below the requirement of retribution). To the mind of the parole board of 1968 however "the type of crime ought not to override all consideration of the offender as an individual ... No category of crime excludes a prisoner altogether from consideration for parole".

It is that doctrine and practice that Mr Brittan has set aside. It is not the individual as such that will in future be considered but the individual as a unit in a class defined by reference to certain broadly defined offences.

The distinction between grave offences and others has been written into the official guidance before - by Mr Roy Jenkins when Home Secretary in 1975. That was in the context of a policy to relieve the overcrowding prisons. Those serving sentences for grave offences would be paroled more sparingly than there was a greater likelihood of their constituting a danger to members of the public if released. That is not Mr Brittan's reason for changing the rules. His reason has to do with deterrence and the exaction of condign punishment. Parole came in when there was more confidence than there is today in the reformatory effect of penal regimes. It came in under the heading "treatment of offenders", with its medical overtones suggestive of a moral or behavioural disorder capable of responding to an appropriate course of professional treatment. Absence of result and the gross impediments that go with the overcrowded state of the prisons have undermined that faith.

While the faith was strong it was easier to regard parole under supervision as a continuation of custodial treatment by other means, a further stage in the rehabilitation of the prisoner to take his place in society as a free man once again (which is what parole still is in theory); and there was correspondingly less need to be disturbed at the gap between length of sentence handed out by the judge and term served behind bars. With the fading of the treatment concept, and the more popular concepts of deterrence and retribution forcing their way back into official thinking, it is hardly surprising, though hardly satisfactory, that parole has come to be seen as a one-way system for revising the length of sentences downwards, which may be all right for some categories of offenders but is not in the case of others.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

safety record

From the General Secretary of the Transport and General Workers' Union

Sir, For some time now our membership, in the form of cabin crews and indeed all airport workers, have viewed with some concern the fact that there had been a clear relaxation in safety measures as compared with a few years ago because apparently fierce compe-tition is encouraging some airlines to cut corners on safety in an effort to reduce costs.

We have no doubt in our minds that the reason for the UK having such a good record of safety in the aviation industry is due to the fact that the state airline has always maintained very stringent precautions, thus carrying every other British concern along with it. Surely, if there is going to be action taken within the next year or so to privatize the aviation industry we are going to see shareholders demanding cost-cutting exercises in all fields with the result that the Civil Aviation Authority may not even be able to control standards at their present level, which even now appear to be deteriorating.

We have seen drastic reductions in staff and we can only repeat our experience, when new management take over existing firms, that costcutting exercises, in the form of asset stripping, staff reductions and all other money-saving projects, are introduced.

This issue needs to be fully considered in the form of a public inquiry so that we can properly ascertain whether the public who are served by the industry, those who work in it and, indeed, those who live in the UK, are being properly protected and whether there is, in effect, a need for such an exercise to be carried out purely for political dogma at the expense of what we have written above.

If the Govenment is adamant that what it is doing is in the public interest, surely it would not object to a public inquiry before it proceeds on such a disastrous course.

Our union would be happy to provide evidence at any hearing to show why this exercise should not be followed through. Yours faithfully,

MOSS EVANS, General Secretary, Transport and General Workers' Union Transport House, Smith Square, Westminster, SW1.

November 24.

Sir, In the correspondence about the new admissions system here in Oxford the impression might have Minister has always seen the case | been given by some letters that there could still be changes in it.

As Chairman of the Management Committee of the Oxford Colleges Admissions Office I should make it clear that this is not so. Colleges collectively took their final decision approving the new scheme on November 3. At the same meeting they also took the decision that these procedures will start in 1985 (for those seeking entry to be admitted to Oxford in October, 1986).

The press and school organizations were given an outline of the new scheme immediately the final decision was taken; and a document setting out the details of the procedures and their implications will be circulated to schools in March.

Yours faithfully, OLIVER TAPLIN, Chairman. Management Committee, Oxford Colleges Admissions Office, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford.

Disruption of concert

From Miss Deborah Bazalgette Sir. I was present at the concert given yesterday evening by the USSR Symphony Orchestra at the Royal Festival Hall. During the short break between the first and second movements of Prokofiev's Classical Symphony groups of demonstrators, strategically placed around the auditorium, shouted very loudly in defence of Soviet Jewry and had to be removed so that the concert could continue.

I do not support the Soviet regime. I do however, carry in my mind a clear and enduring memory of the warm and generous welcome extended to me and my fellow members of the London Symphony Chorus when we spent a week in Moscow earlier this year to give three concerts with this orchestra.

The demonstrators would do well to consider other more timely and more effective ways (of which there are undoubtedly several) to further their indisputably just cause. Yours faithfully.

The scandal is not the department's handling of the Cox and Marks report, Standards in English Schools (which claims secondary modern and grammar schools together have better examination results than comprehensive schools) but the blatant political pressure applied in an attempt to override the DES's careful assessment of the report.

In your anxiety to defend Cox and Marks you misrepresent Sir Keith Joseph's recent statement on the NCES (National Council for Educational Standards) report. You find space to quote Sir Keith's welcome for their "pioneering work" but fail to mention the substantial criticisms of the NCES's methodology contained in three of the statement's five paragraphs.

Nor do you mention the letter to the NCES authors from the DES's statistician, Mr Wakefield, published with the Secretary of State's statement

In this letter Mr Wakefield does not retract the department's criticisms of both the methodology and conclusions of the report. In particular, the department, like all other objective commentators, concludes that the NCES study has failed to take adequate account of the effects of social class. This helps explain why the Cox and Marks study reaches conclusions so much at variance with other studies, such as those by the National Children's Bureau and Edinburgh University.

It is sad to see The Times swallowing the Cox and Marks interpretation of events "hook, line,

From Mrs Freda M. Andrews Sir, Your leader writer's concern at the quality of secondary school education betrays a fundamental error of reasoning.

The fact that too many young people leave school without formal qualifications adds nothing to the debate on comprehensive versus grammar/secondary modern, or whatever other system you care to mention.

It tells us a lot, however, about the inappropriateness of the school curriculum in all types of school and the inadequacies of the present examination system for measuring the achievement and abilities of the majority of the 16-year-old popu-

Let us all stop bickering about comprehensives versus the rest, which can only be measured objectively, as you say, by the inappropriate yardstick of O levels. From Mr James Lees-Milne Sir, Mr Nicholas Baker (November 25) is assuming that the National Trust is greedily demanding yet another grant from the National Heritage Memorial Fund to buy and endow a second-rate house and estate, namely Calke Abbey. As I look upon it, this is not the case at

The trust (in default of any other person or institution forthcoming) is merely asking the Treasury to take the Calke Abbey estate in lieu of death duties, in other words, to forgo what amounts to a windfall. Had the late owner given or devised Calke to the trust there would have been no question of the Treasury benefiting from the despoliation of this property in terms of cash.

But no, the Treasury is demanding its pound of flesh. It is prepared cynically to claim for the Exchequer what amounts to a drop towards its ocean of billions of pounds at the expense of an exceedingly beautiful country house, its original contents, the writer may not have predicted; I agree so much that I am in danger of joining him (or her?) in our own particular schism. Where one or two are gathered together, there is a club. As a Unitarian for many years, I am used to recognizing the centrality of individual faith, searching for one's own values. The purpose, as I understand it, of my sort of church gathering is not, as your writer accuses "all denominations", to insist on its own doctrinal standpoint", but to offer an atmosphere of tolerance and mutual respect wherein all individuals do, as the writer earlier insists, search themselves in order "to reach the ultimate ethical decisions".

The writer is, in my view, brilliant in the argument used for individual faith but, because the seed of the argument was an enthronement of an Anglican archbishop, only makes passing reference to the fact that Christianity, in its multitudinous

Keeping telecom wires uncrossed

· From Mr John Bray

Sir, There is an aspect of the current debate on the privatisation of British Telecom that has hardly been mentioned but which could be of vital importance to present and future users. It is the likelihood that unrestricted privatisation would seriously impair the integrity of the national telecommunication network - that is, the quality ar reliability of the service provided.

A multiplicity of overlapping networks provided by a variety of entrepreneurs could well lead to a fragmented and uneconomic network, with divided and therefore less accountable reponsibility for quality of service and higher costs to the user.

Modern telecommunications has moved far beyond the telephone: it is the universal provider of a wide range of services. It has resulted, on the world scale, in the most complex, extensive and influential artifact yet created by mankind.

Unrestricted privatisation could lead to a variety of non-optimum and possibly conflicting technical and operational standards within the United Kingdom and a deterioration in the quality of service. Failure to achieve clearly recognized and agreed standards within the national network could also lead to a weakening of the voice of the UK in determining international standards and consequently in our ability to secure overseas markets for telecommunications equipment. Furthermore, it makes neither engineering nor economic sense to set up overlapping networks in the same geographical area, any more than it would be to establish several independent railway systems between, say, London and Birming-ham. Nor does the customer wish to have several different cables entering his premises, or separate bills to pay for various telecommunication services.

It is to be hoped that the Telecommunications Bill now under discussion will fully recognize the need for a national telecommunications authority, i.e., British Tele-com, with clearly defined and effective responsibility for the integrity of the national telecommunication network, including its technical and operational standards and quality of service.

Oh well, there are terrorists and What Keynes meant

From Professor Z. A. Silberston Sir, Keynes may have been witty (letter, November 23), but he was not primarily concerned with being witty when he wrote, "In the long run we are all dead." Nor - pace Sir William Rees-Mogg – was he saying that we can be as irresponsible as we like in the short run, since in the long run everything will be forgotten. Just the reverse, in fact. Keynes used the phrase in A Tract on Monetary Reform (p 65, Royal Economic Society edition, Macmillan) when discussing the quantity theory of money.

The theory might predict well in the long run, he said, but - "this long run is a misleading guide to current affairs. In the long run we are all dead. Economists set themselves too easy, too useless a task if in tempestuous seasons they can only tell us that when the storm is long past the ocean is flat again."

What he was saying was that short-term problems cannot be ignored, even though they may sort themselves out in the long run. It was a serious and important observation, applicable to a wide range of economic and social problems. It was also compassionare, as one would expect of that great

It is wrong to describe these changes as increased powers for at present on a serious charge it is often necessary to detain a person, when the expression "helping police with their enquiries" is used. This can be stretched to many days, not the proposed restriction of 36 hours, before appearing before the court. Any senior detective knows that it is often impossible to gather and verify evidence necessary to charge a murderer in that time; particularly when further questions in respect of the offence cannot be put to the accused after he is charged. Statements of admission can be withdrawn as easily as they are made and, I repeat, the time is required to obtain and verify the evidence of witnesses before interviewing the suspect, now to be done in one day and a half before the lawyer can make representations. The area that people ought to be applying their minds to is the restrictions to be placed on police officers in respect of their powers to search football hooligans and others for offensive weapons. #### Science report Teeth yield clues to ancient man

The microscopic study of teeth found on archaeological sites is yielding information about the diet and stresses of ancient communities.

Dr Simon Hillson, an archaeological scientist leading a team at Lancaster University, said it is possible to tell, for example, how children were looked after and whether they lived healthy lives.
"The gradual process of growth may be disrupted as a result of dietary deficiencies or fever. Disturbances of this kind show as defects in the enamel. The exact ages at which these occurred can be determined from the layer The value of such archaeological finds was proved to Dr Hillson in his own research about four years ago into ancient communities living in the Nile Valley. From a study of the defects on the enamel of teeth he was able to identify the period when its growth was tion,

The incidence of disease detectable in the teeth can be crucial in determining the bistory of a community. The weight of bone and tooth fragments may exceed that of any other finds from a site. Best preserved are the hard tissues of teeth enamel, dentine and cement, which provide the vital clues to the life of those early societies.

The behaviour of the tooth during its growth - usually from birth to 16 - is detectable using the Lancaster techniques. For example, the enamel, which covers the crowns of the teeth, grows in layers. Their structure and any deficiencies in the pattern can be detected by microscopic investigation of a small sample or by a cast of the crown.

The Lancaster researchers are using two principal tech-niques. The first requires them to polish a minute slice of the brittle ancient tooth to a thickness of one hundred thousandth of a millimetre. Because of the tooth's condition, the slice requires to be supported by modern materials. The resultant slice is then microscopically examother technique requires the making of a cast of the tooth, enabling scien-tists to examine the layers of its structure. The techniques are able to determine with extreme accuracy the timing of certain events during the tooth growth period.

If an individual died in the growth period his age can be determined to within days, the scientists believe, The methods being devel-oped at Lancaster to examine teeth from archaelogical sites may find uses in medicine and zoology, according to Dr Hillson.

The research at Lancaster has been funded by a grant from the Science and Engineering Research Council.

Feld, who was working on Film Kurier, the only European daily newspaper devoted to cinema, suggested that she join the staff; and so she became Germany's first woman film critic. Feld and Lotte Eisner proved perfect allies in their crusade for better German films. She began to form friendships with film people like Fritz Lang and Asta Neilsen, as well as the young Bert Brecht, of whom she was an early champion.

In 1932 Film Kurier was "Aryanized" and in the early spring of 1933 both Feld and

Excellent outlook for Fidelity Japan Trust

Confidence in Japanese market and the Yen

A top performing unit trust

Over the 12 months to 1st November 1983 Fidelity Japan Trust is the top performing of all unit trusts (source: 'Planned Savings' December), with the offer price rising 118%. This demonstrates our ability to pick stocks in Japan and to use our flexibility to switch between large and small companies.

Optimism for Japan and the Yen

We are confident that the outlook for both the Japanese economy and the Yen is good. With its strength in consumer products, Japan historically has benefitted from an economic upturn. Thus the gathering momentum of the world economy will, we believe, lead to outstanding investment opportunities in the Japan stock market. We also expect the Yen to strengthen giving an additional bonus to investors.

Fidelity's strength in Japan

Fidelity Japan Trust is advised by our Tokyo office, staffed by a unique team of 25 Japanese nationals. This strength in depth is a key factor, we believe, in our enviable investment record in Japan. The Trust gets on-the-spot management and is switched actively between types and sizes of companies as stock market trends change.

Fidelity is one of the largest independent investment management groups in the world, with a research team of 100 top professionals worldwide, and offices in Boston, Hong Kong, London, New York and Tokyo.

Fidelity Japan Trust

This trust aims to produce maximum capital growth from a portfolio chosen from the total range of investments available in Japan. Since launch in October 1981 to 1st December 1983 the unit offer price has risen 116% compared with a rise of 53% in the Tokyo New Index (currency adjusted).

Outstandingly.

Since the launch of the M&G Dividend Fund in May 1964 income distributions on an initial investment of £10,000 have increased from £396 after hasic rate tax in the first full year to £1,900 in 1983.

By contrast, a building society investor has seen his income fluctuate, rising from £386 in 1965 to £1,050 in 1980 and dropping back to £675 in 1983. Anybody whose income depended on a substantial building society investment has seen his return fall over the last 3 years, whilst the Dividend Fund investor has continued to enjoy a steadily increasing income throughout the period.

As for capital value, it would not have fluctuated in a building society, with the original £10,000 remaining intact. But anyone who invested £10,000 in Dividend Fund Income units in 1964 has turned his capital into £38,040 by the end of September, 1983, in addition to the income he has received.

Unit trusts are for long-term investment and not suitable for money you may need at short notice. This is because the price of units and the income from them may go down as well as up.

But if you need income which will grow over the years and can afford to take a long term view, M&G Dividend Fund could be the ideal investment for you. You can be confident that M&G will continue to make income growth the prime objective for this fund, and in the past this has been a successful policy for

M&G now offer an extra allocation of units in Dividend Fund - a unit trust with an outstanding track record

The fund invests in a wide range of ordinary shares including some overseas holdings, with the aim of providing a high and growing return with a yield about 50% higher than that of the F.T. Actuares All-ShareIndex. On 30th November 1983 the estimated current gross yield was 6.61% at an offered price for Income units of 213.2p xd. Prices and yields appear daily in the F.T. An initial charge of 5% is included in the offered price; an annual charge of ntly 1/2% plus VAT of the value of the Fund is deducted from gross income; it is the Managers' intention to increase this to 1% plus VAT, with unitholders' consent, but it is the present intention to restrict this to 34%. Distributions for Income units are paid on 15th January and 15th July. The next distribution date for new investors will be 15th July 1984. You can buy or set units on any business day. Contracts for purchase or sale will be due for settlement 2 or 3 weeks later. Remuneration is payable to accredited agents; rales are avadable on request.

M&G CAPITAL BU

Start a plan before 9th December and get 5% more invested for your first year than shown in the table The M&G Capital Builder Plan

is designed for investors who wish to build up capital out of regular savings. Because it includes life assurance cover M&G reclaim tax on your behalf and add it to your payments (provided that your total life assurance premiums do not exceed the greater of £1,500 p.a. or one sixth of your total income).

Your money is invested in the M&G Bond Fund of your choice from the list in the application form below. You can switch from one Fund to another at any time, subject to a small fee (currently £10).

Anyone aged 18 to 55 can start a plan. The minimum net payment is £12 a month and there is no maximum. Your plan matures after 20 years, but you can cash it in whenever you like after one year's premiums have been paid.

The future value of your plan will depend on your starting age and the performance of the Fund you choose. For example, if a man of 35 started a £20 net a month plan and the unit price grew at an average annual rate of 10%, he could expect to receive £14,440 after 20 years for a total net outlay of £4,800. The unit price reflects the value of the assets held in the Fund and will fluctuate accordingly.

There is an annual charge of currently ¾4% for Accumulation units and 5% for Capital units. Alfhough you can cash in your plan at any time after you have paid one year's premiums you are recommended not to do so for at least four years, to avoid a forfeit of tax relief. encashed for their bid value: there is a deduction from Capital units on early encashment which reduces to nil after 10 years, e.g. you would receive 68% of their value after two years, increasing by 4% for each subsequent year. Accumulation unit prices are reported daily in the Financial Times and Capital unit prices are available from M&G on request. You have no personal liability to tax on capital gains but higher-rate taxpayers are advised to continue payments for at least 10 years, for tax reasons. Tax payable by the Company on capital gains is reflected in the price of units. The cost of dying, like every thing else, goes up, but this year funeral directors have managed to keep prices below the rate of inflation, according to a survey of funeral expenses.

The average funeral now costs £370, representing a rise of less than 5 per cent on last year in spite of increased cemetery fees. This information is based on a sample survey conducted in eight areas throughout England by the Odd Fellows Manchester Unity Friendly Society. With the government grant toward death expenses still at only £30, this leaves an large sum of money still to be

But have you ever thought of a 'do-it-yourself' or family funeral? This idea is put forward (and I should add, rejected) by the vicar of Enfield, the Rev Bill Bowder, who completed the survey of funeral directors. For such a "DIY" funeral, you would have to buy a coffin which would cost about £30, with linings and handles an extra £5 or £10. The death certificate is usually handed to the nearest relative, but a second certificate is required for

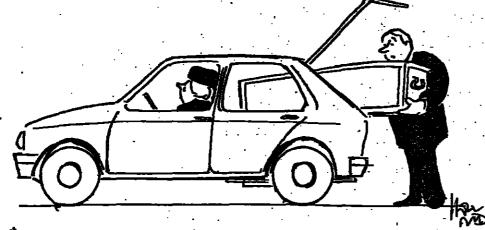

The hospital authorities would be the next hurdle because some have a rule that they will release bodies only to an undertaker. "However, perseverance should win through red tape," says Mr Bowder.

Cemeteries and crematoria vary in their willingness to entertain the idea of a non-standard funeral. One crematorium in the north of England at first refused to accept a coffin that was not in a hearse, but relented when it was pointed out that overwhelming emotional bur-

> With this sort of conclusion it is not surprising that the National Association of Funeral Directors broadly approves of the survey. But the association variations are so great. The association believes that it is more like £350 for an undertaker's fees with another £150 for the extras bringing the total cost of £500. It says the £370 figure which excludes so many extras is "misleading."

someone who lives outside the Camden, for instance, which has a policy of preferring local residents, charges £70 for people living in Camden and £210 for people who have moved away and want to return to be buried. Mr Bowder's survey for the Odd Fellows Society showed that basic funeral costs varied between £105 for a hospital contract in Lowestoft, Suffolk, to £581 for one in Worthing, Sussex. The cheapest funerals on offer from the undertakers in 14 areas, excluding the hospital contract, ranged from £150 in Leeds to £350 in Worthing. A number of undertakers, concerned about the huge variations across the country are pressing for a standardization of the fees charged by local authorities for cemetery and graveyard services.

But a funeral director in Market Harborough, Leicester-shire, says that there can never be a standard price for a funeral. His company operates from a three-storey Georgian building set in ornamental gardens and annot compete in prices with the high street shop. Our nearest crematorium is

An Otley, Yorkshire, undertaker, whose funeral costs average £400 to £600, said: "We care too much about our calling to do a 'chean' funeral." And a Norwich, Norfolk, should be educated about the costs of funerals and encouraged to take out insurance to nothing of spending £1,000 on holidays abroad. They want a high standard of life but they do not want to pay for a high standard of death."

Undertakers' fees are modest, he added, compared with vicars charging £16.50 an hour plus travelling expenses and doctors spending 20 minutes on a death certificate for which they are Planning condition

District Council

Before Lord Fraser of Tullybelton, Lord Keith of Kinkel, Lord Scarman, Lord Roskill and Lord Bridge of Harwich [Speeches delivered November 24]

A condition imposed on a grant of planning permission that the development permitted was not to proceed unless and until a road closure had been brought about was valid notwithstanding that it was not wholly within the power of the applicant for permission to bring about that closure.

The House of Lords dismissed an appeal by the City of Aberdeen District Council from the Second District Council from the Second Division of the Inner House of the Court of Session (Lord Emslie, Lord President, Lord Cameron and Lord Grieve) on January 18, 1983, (1983 SLT 526) who had allowed an appeal by the first respondents, the Grampian Regional Council, from the second respondent, the Secretary of State for Scotland.

The provisions of sections 26 (t), 38, 39 and 198 (1) of the Town and Country Planning (Scotland) Act,

So, 39 and 196 (1) of the Town and Country Planning (Scotland) Act, referred to by Lord Keith are reproduced in identical terms in sections 29 (1), 41, 42 and 209 (1) of the Town and Country Planning Act

Mr J. T. Cameron, QC and Mr R. S. Keen (both of the Scottish Bar) for Aberdeen, Mr J. A. Cameron, QC and Mr A. F. Rodger (both of the Scottish Bar) for Grampian and

LORD KEITH said that Grampian had applied to Aberdeen and to Kincardine and Deeside District Council, the local planning authorities, for planning permission for the change of use of land lying across the authorities' boundaries approval of a site layout. The authorities bad failed to issue authorities bad failed to issue determinations within the statutory time limit, and Grampian had appealed against the deemed refusals of permission to the secretary of state.

The reporter to whom determination of the appeals had been delegated had refused them on the sole ground of traffic safety. He had sole ground of traine salety. He had considered that the hazard would be removed if Wellington Road to the south of the site were to be closed, and had then considered whether it would be competent to grant planning permission subject to a condition requiring the closure of Wellington Road. He had concluded that, since it did not lie wholly within Gram-pian's power to secure the closure of the road, because any closure order that they might make (under section 12 of the Roads (Scotland) Act 1970) would require confirmation by the secretary of state, which, in the event of objections, would not necessarily be granted, the impo-

The issue in the appeal turned on the nature of conditions that might lawfully be abjected to a grant of planning permission under section 26(1) of the 1972 Act. The power to abject conditions was expressed in the widest possible terms: "the local planning authority may grant planning permission either uncondi-tionally or subject to such conditions as they think fit".

The power was not, however, unlimited. The nature of the limitations was well settled by authority and had been compendiously stated by Viscount Dilhorne in Newbury District Council y ment ([1981] AC 578, 599-600):

"It follows that the conditions imposed must be for a planning purpose and not for any ulterior one, and that they must fairly and reasonably relate to the development permitted. Also they must not be so unreasonable that no reasonable planning authority could have imposed them: . . . ". Grampian's argument, which had prevailed before the First Division, prevailed before the First Division, accepted that a condition requiring them to secure the closure of Wellington Road would be invalid as infringing the last of those limitations, in respect that it would not lie within their power to bring about that result at their own hand and acception that their own hand and the control of the security of the and, accordingly, the condition would be unenforceable. Authority for that was to be found in British Airports Authority v Secretary of State for Scotland (1979 SC 200). But it was maintained that the reporter had misdirected himself by failing to consider whether, given

Such a condition, it was argued, was a condition that development on the cite should not proceed unless and site should not proceed unless and until Wellington Road had been

Before the House, Aberdeen had attacked the First Division's acceptance of that argument on the acceptance of the imposition on the ground that the imposition on the grant of planning permission of any negative condition related to the

It was maintained that there was no practical distinction between a condition requiring a result that it was not within the power of the applicant aloue to bring about and a condition prescribing that no development should begin until that result had been achieved, because in either case the practical effect was to require the applicant to bring about something that was not within his power. It was said to be, in any event, undesirable that there should be prolonged uncertainty as to whether the development would be able to go forward or not.

There was no substance in those contentions. In the first place, there was a crucial difference between the that the latter was enforceable while the former was not. In the second place, the reasonableness of any condition had to be considered in the light of the circumstances

In this case, the proposals for development put forward by Grampian had been found by the reporter to be generally desirable in the public interest. The traffic problem was capable of being solved by the road closure, which had at least recognible property of being least reasonable prospects of being achieved under statutory powers. In the circumstances, it would have been not only not unreason-able but highly appropriate to grant planning permission subject to the condition that the development was not to proceed unless and until the closure had been brought about. In any event, it was impossible to view a condition of that nature as unreasonable and not within the scope of section 26(1) of the Act if regard was had to section 198. Subsection (1) provided:

The secretary of state may by order satisfied that it is necessary to do so in order to enable development to be carried out in accordance with planning permission granted under Part III of this Act, or to be carried out by a government department."

A situation where planning permission had been granted subject to a condition that the development was not to proceed until a particular highway had been closed was plainly one situation within the contemplation of that enactmen though no doubt there were others.

The stopping up of the highway would obviously be necessary in order to enable the development to be carried out. So it was reasonable to infer that precisely the type of condition that was in issue in this appeal had been envisaged by the slature in enacting section 26(1). As it happened, Grampian had themselves power, under section 12 of the 1970 Act, to promote an order for the closure of the road. But that was an accident, though it might perhaps make the case an a fortion one. Section 198 was entirely general and was apt to favour strongly the reasonableness of negative conditions relating to the closure of highways As to the argument on uncer-tainty, it was sufficient to notice that the provisions of sections 38 and 39 of the Act, about the limit of duration of planning permissions, indicated the recognition that development that was the subject of planning permission might not be carried out within any particular time-scale or at all. There was nothing to compel any successful applicant for planning permission to carry out his development, so uncertainty might be said to be a natural feature of the planning

Prospects for capital growth

Are you looking for capital growth from a low-risk investment? If so, we believe that Save & Prosper Gilt and Fixed Interest Growth Fund provides an attractive answer with 6 key features.

Maximum capital growth
The aim of the Fund is to maximise capital growth, without income constraints, through an actively managed portfolio of gilts and other fixed-interest securities.

1 Low-risk investment

Z Gilts and fixed-interest investments -particularly the shorter-term instruments—can be less volatile than shares. With interest rates relatively stable or likely to fall there is good potential for capital appreciation in the short term.

3 Capital gains tax advantage
The Fund is not liable to any tax on capital gains, so the Managers are free to switch holdings without a tax penalty.

Low yield The Fund currently provides a low yield-3.66% p.a. on 30th November 1983. This makes the Fund particularly attractive for higher rate taxpayers. 5 Actively managed portfolio

The Fund benefits from full-time management by experienced fixedinterest managers who are responsible for funds of around £265 million.

Low initial charge 6 While most unit trusts have an initial charge of 5% (plus rounding), the initial charge of this Fund is only 1% (plus rounding). The bid/offer spread is also currently very low at 1%.

GENERAL INFORMATION DEALING IN UNITS Units in the DEALING IN ONLY IS ONEY IN THE FIND MAY NORMALLY OF SOLID OR ANY WORKING days. Certificates will normally be forwarded within 14 working days. Before Sir John Donaldson Master position of a third party in relation to a writ of sequestration was analogous to that of third party in relation to an injunction. In the context of Eckman's case

Where sequestration of a contem-nor's assets had been ordered, the court was concerned only with a bank which held or had held money anyone who knowingly took any on behalf of a contemnor. Applying that principle in the present case, the refusal to disclose the information requested was clearly an obstruction to the performance of the sequestrators' duty. ## Board's policy means that viewers must miss a classic

Willis: lively challenger

Willis has won all his 13 bouts,

Boxing Correspondent It is a pity that the British Boxing Board of Control's policy of limiting promoters to four days a year when they can arrange for bouts to be televised on the day they take place will prevent the British lightweight championship from being shown on ITV screens this afternoon.

The viewers will be missing the best of British courage and skill when George Ferney, of Hardepool, defends his title against Ton Willis, of Liverpool, at the Regent Crest Hotel, Marylebone, London.

The two men, though virtually The two men, though virtually unknown to the general public, are boxers of the highest standing in Britain and their contrasting styles would make exciting watching. Feeney, the boxer, has the perfect temperament to weather the assaults of Willis, the boxer-fighter.

The champion is never rattled even when the punches are landing on his nose, a part of his face which has an aversion to being pushed sround. Feeney has been beaten nine times in his 25 bouts, but five of his defeats have been at the hands of high class opponents - Cornelius sround. Feeney has been beaten nine times in his 25 bouts, but five of his defeats bave been at the hands of high class opponents - Cornelius Bozz-Edwards. Clinton McKenzie, Davidson Andeh, Ray Mancini, the world champion, and House world champion, and Howard Davis. The last two men tested Feency's abilities to the full and the experience appears to have made him an even better boxer.

Willis, too, has a good temperament but he is not quite so phlegmatic as Feeney. He can get

15 to 12 rounds. But Willis could prove a little too lively and his greater variety of punches could make him the first home boxer to stop Feeney.

In fact of the fact that ITV's programme flexibility is restricted by commercial consideration and also because they pay 50 per cent more for same-day showings than delayed screenings, the board might have relaxed their television policy. A few days ago, Ray Clarke, the secretary of the board, told me that one way out of this impasse was for Frank Warren, a promoter who has worked with ITV, to put on shows at different venues under the names of different licence-holders. Warren was prepared to do this, but when the proposition was put to the board by ITV it was considered to have come too late to be practicable.

There had been some doubts There had been some doubts about the contest going on at all. The board it seemed, insisted that unless they received a written assurance from Warren that he would not show the bout the same day on television they would withdraw the officials. Yesterday, Mr Clarke denied this. The universities and hospitals championships will be held at Mountford Hall, Liverpool University today. There are 50 entries and Galway rattled when things are not going his way though usually his uncompro-mising attitude has always preround Feeney's jabs sooner or later.

The Great Britain men's hockey tram, with Roger Self, manager, and David Whitaker, coach, leave for Hongkong today to try to regain their lost horizon - a place in the Olympic Games at Los Angeles next year. Their results, and final placing in the 10-nations Hongkong tourna-ment, will be taken into account when the technical committee of the International Hockey Federation (FIH) meet in January to select the 12 teams for Los Angeles.

The British team does not have a complete schedule of matches, knowing only that their first game is against Parkissan on Dec 11. "It is difficult." Self said yesterday, "to plan any strategy without knowing received by the parket in which our specifically the order in which our obstacles appear. "We have prepared the British team as well as we have been able to, and were permitted to do by the respective constituent associations."

This last remark refers to the question of the availability of players and he has had about four months in which to prepare a force for his own 'Battle of Britain'.

Self coached Southgate to three successive triumphs in the Euro-pean Club championship from 1976 10 1978, and in the same capacity helped Wales to achieve their only three victories over England, the most recent at Penarth in 1973. After the British team had missed

Silver Buck looks good as gold

Silver Buck and Robert Earn-shaw, the joint heroes of the 1982 Cheltenham Gold Cup should prove Cheltenham Gold Cup should prove they are as formidable a partnership as ever by beating Observe in the Rehearsal Chase at Chepstow this afternoon. Because of the last-min-ute withdrawals of Wollow Will and Ro's Owen from Sandown, John Francome now takes over from Ben Winter has shown his customary patience in refusing to run Andrew Gretton's seven-year-old in the Gold Cup. However, although Observe's stamina and courage are sure to win him good races later in the seaon, it is unreasonable to expect him to give 4lb to a razor-sharp Silver Buck at this stage of the de Haan on Observe. As the largest prize-money earner in the history of steeplechasing Silver Buck rather fell from grace last season. At no time did he show that ability to quicken at the end of David Gandolfo has a habit of making his presence felt at Chepstow. Buck House and Gallant Royal, involved in an exciting finish to the Gerry Fielden Hurdle at Newbury last Saturday, are among 53 entries for the £25,000 Sweeps Handicap Hurdle at Leopardstown on January 14. Last tear's winner, Fredcoteri is also among the Irish-trained entries, as are Dawn Run and Boreen Prince. Entries from England include Amarach, ima and The Foobroker.

Plastic rails for Epsom

Riding risks in next year's Derby will be reduced by the removal of concrete posts and installation of from the top of the Epsom hill.

round Tattenham Corner, to the beginning of the straight. Tim Nelligan, United Racecours-es' chairman, said yesterday: "All the concrete posts in that area have the touctet posts in that are a we been removed, and we intend to install new plastic uprights and rails that are standard on Paris tracks and in Hongkong. They are now with the Jockey Club for official approval here.

"The first phase, costing £12,000 will be completed by the Epsom spring meeting. Over two or three years, plastic rails will replace existing ones round the entire course." Mr Nelligan revealed that aluminium ralls had been tried at Epsom, but they had been stolen.

Ron Atkins, the jockeys safety officer, commented: "This will be a great improvement in preventing injuries. These rails and uprights are plastic, and everything collapses if they are hit. They've been used in France for 12 years."

Britain hopeful of Athens summit

By Patricia Clough

The Government sees the chance of a breakthrough at the Athens EEC summit, thanks to France's new proposals to control the growth in community spending, Mr Malcolm Rifkind, Minister of State at the Foreign Office, said yesterday.

While Eurocrats in Brussels were expressing doubts that the summit would resolve much, if anything, of the Community's huge budget and agriculture crisis, Mr Rifkind told The Times: "There is no reason for reason for the community of the times."

pessimism."
There had been "substantial convergence" in the 10 mem-bers' views since the last summit in Stuttgart in June, he said in an interview. The new proposals, in which France envisaged for the first time restrictions on farm spending, was a "potential major break-

"Now France, West Germany, Britain and the Netherlands are speaking with a very similar voice," he said. This meant that there was a broad base on which to work for effective reforms.

Controls on agricultural spending, one of Mrs Thatcher's essential conditions for any increase in the Community's own income, would have consequences for farmers, he said. But the government would oppose any measures that discriminated against British farmers, who are more efficient than most of their continental colleagues.
In particular, it would combat any attempt to penalize intensive milk production The European Paarliament's threat to freeze Britain's 1983 budget rebate or reject the whole EEC budget if the summit did not agree on budgetary reform would have no effect on the Athens meetings, he said. The Government "shares the concern" of the seven Tory backbenchers who voted with Labour to oppose any increase in the EEC's own financial

Falklands calendar tours around the islands

One of the New Year's more unusual calendars has been produced by Mr Stephen Whitiey the Falklands Island's veterinary officer, whose photographs of views, landmarks and wildlife were taken on his continual travels around the islands. (Sandra Hennel

The British public, however, will not get the chance to bey it for, although it is being printed in London, all 5,000 copies are going to the Falklands.

Party. Prime Minister, Mrs Thatcher told the Commons she was restoring the practice of awarding honours for political services. She undertook to forward to the scrutiny committee any names she added personally to the honours list at CBE rank or above. It is impossible to tell, however, from reading a routine konours list which names were recommended by the Prime Minister personally unless it specifies that the award was for political services and the person bonoured was a sup-porter of the Conservatives. The bulk of New Year and Birthday honours lists compiled on the basis recommendations processed by the Whitehall machine, rather than arising from a political missative, and do not always pass through the scratiny committee's hands. But resignation honours nominated by outgoing Prime Ministers are examined by the Privy Council-

The committee's powers, stated most recently in a 1979
Order in Council, enable Lord Shackleton, Lord Franks and Lord Carr to report to the,
Prime Minister if "the past history or general character of a person rendered him unsuit-able to be recommended."

"In the event of the committee reporting against any name and the Prime Minister determining still to recommend such a name, a copy of the report of the committee will be submitted to Her Majesty with In pursuing their inquiries, the Privy Councillors can

No shed is frost free in prolonged periods of frost unless it is heated. If a frost lasts for three days and nights it will penetrate even a brick-built garage. So bring indoors dahlia and begonia tubers and gladiolus corms. Do not put them in the loft because on bitter nights forst can penetrate an nights forst can penetrate an unheated loft.

Watch now for signs of mice in bean seed will often prove a better bean seet will once prove a center bait than cheese. Slugs can be a nuisance eating the buds of Iris Unguicularis (I. stylosa) and other plants. So put down generous quantifies of slug bait or water on liquid slug killer. Put a cloche or two over parsley plants now.
